Met Office forecasters warn of more rain to come

22 October 2001

After a wet weekend across much of the country, Met Office forecasters are warning of further rain over the next few days. 50 to 60mm of rain have fallen in the wettest parts of Kent, Essex and Cambridgeshire during the day, not far short of a normal October's rain in less than 24 hours.

Ewen McCallum, Head of Forecasting at the Met Office said: "After a wet Sunday in the east, we should all be aware that more rain is expected in the next few days. We can only advise people to keep a close eye on our weather forecasts and warnings, along with advice issued by the Environment Agency on flooding."
